

Around the world, women, LGBTQ people, young people, workers are taking to the streets, striking and demonstrating to say ENOUGH to a political and business elite that perpetuate sexism and oppression. Let's take to the streets on IWD 8 March 2019 to call for:

1. End gender-based violence & harassment

One in three women globally is affected by domestic violence. 63% of female workers aged 18-24 have experienced sexual harassment at work.

2. End the gender pay gap - for a living wage for all

More than 50 years after women went on strike for equal pay, the gender pay gap is still 14%. Nurses and midwives taking strike action against low pay are an example of the type of movement we need to build to challenge the gender pay gap in practice.

3. End precarious conditions in work and housing

We protested, struck4repeal & canvassed in our tens of thousands to win repeal & abortion rights -- we said YES to choice -- let's continue the struggle for full equality for everyone.

Join #Time4Equality - get in touch regarding actions in your area
Check us out on FB, Instagram and Twitter:
iwdwalkout4equality@gmail.com

Join us on 8 March 2019 at 3pm on O'Connell Bridge

30% of workers in Ireland earn below the living wage. 460k young workers don't have the means to leave their parents' home. Workers are struggling to make ends meet or put a roof over their head - enough is enough!

4. Solidarity with the struggle for abortion rights in the North

A struggle from below won abortion rights in the South. 65% of people in the North support abortion rights - the North won't be left behind!

5. Solidarity with struggles against oppression & workers' struggles at home & abroad

8 March, International Women's Day, will see strikes and protests all over the world, fighting against oppression and for real equality. We are part of that global struggle.

#Time4Equality

3pm, O'Connell Bridge, Dublin
& protests across the country

International
Women's Day